Easy Heat – heating made easy!

Leading electric heating manufacturer, Easy Heat, has unveiled a unique control system designed specifically for the self catering industry where heat demand varies depending on occupancy and individual occupants' needs.

Used in conjunction with Easy Heat's range of water filled electric radiators the new RFC3 pre-set timer controller provides guests with heat on demand while simultaneously conserving energy and minimising bills by only delivering it when and where it is needed.

A heating schedule is pre-programmed by the owner or property manager with only limited changes by occupants and cleaning personnel permitted. These include altering the set temperature to between 16°C and 28°C, or to no heating at all – a temporary function as the unit reverts to the pre-set temperature at the next heating phase – and a boost function which turns the system on for one hour outside the normal operating times. Meanwhile, each radiator's built in thermostat monitors the conditions in each room to eliminate both overheating and cold spots.

When unoccupied the property can also be put into holiday mode where the system reverts to frost protection and the heating schedule is suspended. The RFC3 also benefits from fully automatic time set including daylight saving adjustments.

Tamper proof, the system offers complete peace of mind with the additional benefits of being maintenance free – electric water filled radiators do not need to be bled, topped up or serviced – and quick and easy to install.

Easy Heat is the only British company to transform the conventional central heating system by integrating a mini boiler, pump and thermostat into each radiator. Wall mounted on brackets and plugged into any 13 amp socket, the system requires no pipework, thereby eliminating this form of energy wastage, and offers complete flexibility for building design and room layout. And, because Easy Heat radiators operate without a central boiler, there is no risk of total system failure.
